

It is a sad day when local warnings designed to advise citizens of potential disasters cannot be broadcast on local radio stations because those stations are not manned by people, but by machines. Local radio needs to stay "real" - live and current. Our nation is not served well by a media monopoly.